New York — The precarious position of South Vietnam's air force has raised doubts among United States military men of that force's effectiveness in supporting ground troops in the expected battle for Saigon. That battle appears appreciably nearer as a result of North Vietnamese successes northwest and north of Saigon. Communist forces are reported moving out of the southern hills of the Central Highlands toward the low country around the capital.

Until now, American analysts had expected the air arm to play a major role in any fighting in the Saigon sector. They regarded it as a highly experienced force, with high morale.

The fighter-bombers and light bombers, it was reckoned, would be more effective once the North Vietnamese emerged into the open country and offered easier targets. Such estimates may now have to be revised

South Vietnam began the war with approximately 500 military aircraft. But, according to Pentagon sources, more than 200 of these have been put in storage before the start of the current North Vietnamese offensive because of shortages of maintenance personnel and spare parts.

The South Vietnamese have admitted the loss of 25 A37 light bombers since January, the majority in the fighting of the last two weeks.

Most analysts believe that Hanoi's high command will exploit the present momentum of the offensive and push on Saigon.

There has been an increase of Communist activity in the area of Tay Ninh. American analysts believe the main armored drive on Saigon will develop from that sector.

. . . Death Toll Hits 17

By United Press International Searchers in planes, National Guard helicopters, snowplows and showmobiles hunted Friday for marooned victims of a wild blizzard that swept the Rockies, northern plains and upper most of the state.

The death toll mounted to 17 in the blizzard that slashed across a 1,000-mile belt of the northland and twisters, high winds, ice and snow storms that swept more than two dozen Western, Midwestern and Southern states.

While blizzard conditions prevailed in the north, a tornado dipped out a thunderstorm and slammed into Warren, Ark., Friday night, injuring several persons and causing extensive damage.

National Guard units moved into the area and extra police and ambulance service was called to the area.

"There must have been quite a bit of property damage or they wouldn't have done that," a state police spokesman said.

3-Day Blizzard

Blizzard snows swept North Daketa and South Daketa for the third day in a row. Elsewhere the storm let up sufficiently for searchers to penetrate 10-footdeep drifts and open many main highways.

North Dakotas's blizzard toll rose to six. South Dakota and Wisconsin each counted two blizzard-attributed fatalities and Nebraska one Other weatherrelated deaths included 2 in Indiana and 1 each in Illinois, Iowa and Texas.

Skiers Rescued A geologist and his son, who were stranded by a blizzard on the continental divide while on a cross-country skiing jaunt near Aspen. Colo., were rescued by searchers directed by a Civil Air Patrol pilot The pilot saw their bright orange tent in the snow.

Ford To Tell Tax Cut Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford will address the nation Saturday night to disclose his decision on the $24.8 billion tax cut bill and make a statement on economic policy, the White House announced Friday. However, Press Secretary Ron Nessen declined to give any hints about whether

Ford will sign or veto the tax measure. When asked whether the President had made up his mind, Nessen told reporters: "He is deciding and will announce his decision tomorrow (Saturday) evening.'

Nessen said the three major networks had agreed to broadcast Ford's address on television and radio. The President plans to speak at 7:30 p.m. EDT from the Oval Office for about 10 to 15 minutes, his press secretary said.

Besides the tax cut bill, Ford also will speak on "broader economic matters," Nessen said.

Within an hour after his address, the President will leave for Palm Springs, Calif., for an Easter holiday vacation and several speechmaking and business stops.

Ford has been conferring with his top economic advisers for the past two days while trying to reach a decision on the tax bill, which would provide the biggest tax cut for Americans in 30 years.

Nessen said Ford has received written recommendations from all of his economic policy board advisers. However, a White in those recommendations.

The President met for the second day in a row Friday with his economic and energy advisers. Unlike Thursday's session, however, Nessen said they did not discuss the tax cut bill specifically or the question of what action Ford should take on it.

What did come up, though, Nessen said, was a discussion of the budget outlook,.. with predictions from Office of Management and Budget Director James Lynn that, if Congress passes all the bills it is contemplating, the federal deficit for the fiscal year that begins July I will total $105

mean $125 billion in government borrowing not know Ford's decision on the tax rebate bill, nevertheless declared the bill contains

The official said the provisions - he listed five -- are of major concern to the administration and "I know they are being studied" at the White House. He said the

would be a lousy precedent," he said.

- The earned income credit. He said this amounts to welfare reform and is similar to a negative income tax. While it may be desirable in other legislation, "it has no place in this bill," the official said.

— The $50 payment to Social Security recipients. Funds for this would have to come from general revenue, which has never been done before in the Social Security program, he said, adding that it does not belong in a tax cut bill.

- Repeal of the oil depletion allowance for big companies, while maintaining it for independent companies. Again, the official said, repeal is "incompatible" with what should be the purpose of the rebate bill.

- Provisions affecting taxation of U.S. firms operating overseas. These provisions would limit the degree to which the companies can subtract taxes paid to foreign governments from their U.S. tax liability. In addition, the official pointed out the recommended. He said the legislation is potentially inflationary and that money gained in special benefits by Social Security recipients, for example, could be more than offset by a return to high inflation next year.

Ford has until midnight, April 8 to act on the tax measure.

Ford To Tell Tax Cut Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford will address the nation Saturday night to disclose his decision on the $24.8 billion tax cut bill and make a statement on economic policy, the White House announced Friday. However, Press Secretary Ron Nessen declined to give any hints about whether Ford will sign or veto the tax measure. When asked whether the President had made up his mind, Nessen told reporters: "He is deciding and will announce his decision tomorrow (Saturday) evening." Nessen said the three major networks had agreed to broadcast Ford's address on television and radio. The President plans to speak at 7:30 p.m. EDT from the Oval Office for about 10 to 15 minutes, his press secretary said.

Besides the tax cut bill, Ford also will speak on "broader economic matters,"

Within an hour after his address, the President will leave for Palm Springs, Calif., for an Easter holiday vacation and several speechmaking and business stops. Ford has been conferring with his top economic advisers for the past two days while trying to reach a decision on the tax bill, which would provide the biggest tax cut for Americans in 30 years.

Nessen-said Ford has received written recommendations from all of his economic policy board advisers. However, a White in those recommendations.

The President met for the second day in a row Friday with his economic and energy advisers. Unlike Thursday's session, however, Nessen said they did not discuss the tax cut bill specifically or the question of what action Ford should take on it.

What did come up, though, Nessen said, was a discussion of the budget outlook, with predictions from Office of Management and Budget Director James Lynn that, if Congress passes all the bills it is contemplating, the federal deficit for the fiscal year that begins July 1 will total $105

Nessen said Lynn predicted that would mean $125 billion in government

A high Treasury source, who said he did not know Ford's decision on the tax rebate bill, nevertheless declared the bill contains "several provisions that are outrageous."

The official said the provisions - he listed five - are of major concern to the administration and "I know they are being studied" at the White House. He said the administration objects to the following:

- The tax credit for new home purchases. The Treasury official said this provision would be of limited benefit to the economy, although a few builders and realtors might individually gain from it. "It would be a lousy precedent," he said.

- The earned income credit. He said this amounts to welfare reform and is similar to a negative income tax. While it may be desirable in other legislation, "it has no place in this bill," the official said.

- The $50 payment to Social Security recipients. Funds for this would have to come from general revenue, which has never been done before in the Social Security program, he said, adding that it does not belong in a tax cut bill.

- Repeal of the oil depletion allowance for big companies, while maintaining it for independent companies. Again, the official said, repeal is"incompatible" with what should be the purpose of the rebate bill.

- Provisions affecting taxation of U.S. firms operating overseas. These provisions would limit the degree to which the companies can subtract taxes paid to foreign governments from their U.S. tax liability. In addition, the official pointed out the total amount of the congressional tax plan is $6 billion above what Ford had recommended.

He said the legislation is potentially inflationary and that money gained in special benefits by Social Security recipients, for example, could be more than offset by a return to high inflation next year.

Ford has until midnight, April 8 to act on the tax measure.

Chamber Members Out Of Line

Wednesday the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors talked about political involvement and whether it is a proper chamber function.

We'll leave that up to the chamber to decide. But if the chamber decides to go into the business of "informing" its membership and the community at large on election issues, we hope that it conducts itself responsibly.

The discussion this week apparently was prompted by an outburst by Director Richard Chapin, himself a candidate for reelection to the Lincoln Airport Authority. "There are some people running for office in Lincoln who are damned dangerous to the future of the community," Chapin said.

Chamber President Paul Amen chimed in with "I'm concerned how people running for office today will shape Lincoln ... into what it will be 35 years from now.

We're hearing too many socialistic ideas." Chamber officials distributed newspaper clippings explaining the views of City Council candidates Steve Tiwald and Ron Kurtenbach.

Kurtenbach has talked about such things as the redistribution of income something the chamber wouldn't be better prepared and more thoughtful than anybody else's. These candidates have been unfairly slurred by a director of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce and it appears as if

In Honor Of Norris

Efforts to honor the memory of the late Sen. George W. Norris, who was perhaps this state's most distinguished contribution to national life, have been mounted by Nebraska's rural electric systems and are being captained by Sens. Carl Curtis of Nebraska and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

The senators will introduce a bill in Congress to enable the Interior Department to acquire the Norris home in McCook, as well as nearby property, to establish a "George W. Norris Home National Historic Site." A similar bill will be introduced in the House by Nebraska Congresswoman Virginia Smith.

Norris was a member of Congress for 40 years and was the legislator most responsible for formation of the Rural Electrification Administration.

He was responsible for a good deal more than that, of course.

A Gap In The Law?

In the Today's Mail column on Friday's editorial page, reader Edgar Pearlstein of Lincoln wrote that he sees a gap in the new city campaign income and expense reporting law.

"The gap is that a candidate can get promises of contributions, but not have to report them until the money actually comes in. Thus, one can still conduct an expensive campaign and not tell the electorate who is paying for it until after the election is over," Pearlstein said in his

expected to cotton to. But don't you suppose the electorate can judge whether these ideas have merit? It might just be that Kurtenbach's beliefs will be more politically dangerous to himself than to the community.

We took a look at Steve Tiwald's public statements. He, better than any other council candidate, has laid down a program, a statement of his beliefs. He has talked in the past few weeks about the need for better public transportation (bus system), city-county consolidation and programs for the elderly. These are things all candidates are talking about and they are not revolutionary and they shouldn't shake the pillars of the business community. If anything, Tiwald's statements have been the rest of the board didn't object too

If the chamber wants to broaden its political involvement it should tone its act down a bit if it wants to be credible. It has had an asinine, irresponsible beginning.

Norris, known variously as "the fighting liberal" and the "gentle knight of progressive ideals" and as a champion of American democracy, died only some 30 years ago. It seems like he has been gone a hundred or more. It seems like it was in a far different age when Nebraska was represented in Washington by someone of Norris' stature. Young Nebraskans have to look to their history books to find out about his kind of statesmanship.

We have long felt that one way to honor Norris and benefit this state in the process is to restore to Nebraskans and to the U.S. Senate the kind of representation, leadership and statesmanship that Norris but the law does not require him to tell from whom he expects to get the money with which to repay the loan.'

Nebraska once produced giants who had impact on the American scene. Hopefully we are not done yet.

It appears that some sort of "gap' exists, but a legislative remedy doesn't occur to us right off the bat. We don't think governmental bodies should legislate against taking out loans for campaigns.

We think, however, that voters will see around or through the "gap"

The candidate who details his or her contributions and expenses as the campaign progresses — according to law or more frequently should the candidate so desire — will be seen as a candidate with nothing to hide. And that will be to his or her benefit.

TOM WICKER

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has added his voice to those who would have us believe the "Domino Theory" that the collapse of South Vietnam would endanger American positions throughout the world. But Kissinger went further.

Not only is Congress in its reluctance to grant more military aid to South Vietnam risking the domino effect, he told a news conference. It is also ignoring a "moral commitment" he and President Nixon made in working out the Paris accords of 1973. Therefore, the question is not just that of South Vietnam's survival as an independent, noncommunist country; the question also is "what kind of a people we are."

Kissinger's implication is clear - that if Congress does not honor the claimed "moral commitment" Americans will be shown to be a perfidious kind of people. Such ominous talk is aimed at the Democratic Congress - as Leslie Gelb of The New York Times learned in a survey of private administration opinion - and has little relation to reality.

 $\Delta \Delta \Delta$

Aside from the egregious insult offered by Kissinger to the American people, whose financial and blood sacrifices for South Vietnam have been immense, the whole idea of a moral commitment stemming from the 1973 accords has to be questioned. Kissinger negotiated that agreement in secret: American promises he might have made were not embodied in any document requiring ratification by Congress; and neither he nor Nixon had the right or the authority to make

"moral commitments" about in writing. However skillful which the American people knew nothing.

Gerald Ford, for example, was House minority leader at the time of the Paris accords. But long after he became president in August, 1974, he was saving privately that he did not know what promises Kissinger might have made at Paris, or in securing South Vietnamese acquiescence to the accords, or whether any such promises were Kissinger may be at secret negotiations, he cannot elevate that kind of diplomacy into "moral commitments" by the American people.

☆ ☆ ☆ What, moreover, do Kissinger and Ford offer? They apparently suggest that a three-year extension of more military aid would Domino Theory, preserve the and moral commitments.

Is Kissinger On The Way Out?

American reputation for standing by an ally, and - in Kissinger's view - give South Vietnam at least a chance to become self-sustaining.

Whose 'Moral Commitment' Is It?

There is no reason to suppose that a three-year extension even at the incredible level of $2 billion annually that the administration has proposed would do any of those things. It could not satisfy a moral commitment to sustain South Vietnam if at the end of three years that unhappy country still could not defend itself. If the Domino Theory means anything now, it would mean as much three years from now. And if the United States is bidden by history to stand by any ally, no matter how dubious, at all costs and in all circumstances, lest no one ever again accept the American word, why would the United States not be as obligated three years in the future as it is claimed to be in 1975? Finally, if anyone really believes that three more years of any kind of aid at any level might make South Vietnam selfsustaining, he has not been in this world but in some other for the past 15 years.

is a safe bet, would prove to be no such thing. If Congress accepts that proposition now, and if it results in South Vietnam's struggling along as an independent entity for three more years, it is as certain as anything can be that this administration, if re-elected, or some other if it is as mesmerized by Indochina as the last four, will be back for satisfy the great moral commit-still another round of aid - and ment, stultify the effects of the talking once again of dominoes

In fact, if the history of this fruitless war is any guide. It suggests that in three years, at any conceivable level of American military aid, South Vietnam will not be better but worse off - with more Vietnamese dead, homeless and mutilated, with the Vietnamese society and economy further blasted, and with the military position of the Thieu or some other non-communist regime further weakened. What kind of "moral commitment" is it for Gerald Ford and Henry Kissinger to urge Congress to fund a war for what they describe as American objectives when it is the Vietnamese people who will pay the real price in blood and destruction?

It would be far better to twist Thieu's arm, as Kissinger did not hesitate to twist it at the time of the Paris accords in 1973, to enter into real peace negotiations with Hanoi now, while something is left to negotiate. But there is not much chance that Kissinger and Ford will do that.

"The only lesson that our politicians seem to have learned from the 1947-1952 China trauma," John Paton Davies recently wrote the editor of The New York Times, "is that a communist takeover in an East Asian country can be politically disastrous for American politicians."

So they ignore, willfully or otherwise, "the far more important China lesson . . . that the United States cannot make good serious deficiencies of leadership and collective will in a foreign country" - not with troops, not with money.

MARQUIS

WASHINGTON — As Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was flying back and forth like a ping-pong ball between Egypt and Israel in a vain effort for a further disengagement, this capital indulged in a favorite guessing game. The question at those intimate little dinner parties was: How long will Henry stay?

While the failure of his mission may mean a reassessment, those knowing him best over many years believe he will leave by the end of the year. His immediate task is to reshape American policy in the Middle East with the prospect of a long, quarrelsome conference at Geneva as Israel faces the united Arab powers.

Blamed for everything that goes wrong everywhere in the world, Kissinger sees his late like that of other secretaries of state who have gone down before accumulated troubles at home and abroad. In the best of times a difficult office, in the worst of times the secretary faces the barricades of hostility every day. At the end of his tenure Dean Acheson took his punishment from the extreme right; Kissinger's attackers are on the left. $\Delta \Delta \Delta$

The direction of the fire is unimportant. The withering fusillade destroys the usefulness of the individual. There must be added in Kissinger's instance the fact that he was built up, with a strong assist from his own ego, to the role of Super-K. That inflation was a grave handicap.

In the view of intimates, he will leave at the end of 1975 to take up residence at Oxford in England. As lecturer in residence, dividing his time between the towers of academe and an apartment in London, he will enjoy the friendship of his innumerable friends in England and on the continent. Many were his students during his years at Harvard. At the same time he will have leisure to write the memoirs for which he has been offered breeze for a man who took on so many responsibilities in a trying, almost impossible office.

As his friends of long standing see it, a factor in his equation is his wife, Nancy. An able assistant to Nelson Rockefeller in the studies Rockefeller directed on defense and foreign policy, she is said to have a strong feeling about the injustice of the attacks directed at her husband. Her own temperament, these same friends say, is much more adapted to the academic life rather than to the constant pressures of high public office, although with charm and intelligence she responds to the demands that go with being Mrs.

In an interview in the magazine, Ladies Home Journal, Mrs. Kissinger says that she sees her husband much more as the academic type, quietly working away writing his books, rather than as a cabinet officer in the full blaze of publicity. In the interview with Marvin Kalb, the CBS correspondent who has accompanied the Kissingers on their Middle East travels, Given his extraordinary resources of there can be seen an intimation of a wish energy and brain power, all this will be a to go back to the quieter life of academia.

Health is still another factor. Those knowing Kissinger over the years are aware that under stress he becomes a compulsive eater. At present he looks it. to put it mildly, decidedly overweight and that for a man of his build and of his intensity is a built-in risk.

During the present shuttle, he was pressed by reporters accompanying him about rumors that he would be leaving the office. Having nothing to say on that score, he did talk in a general way about a possible successor. Yes, Elliot Richardson, currently ambassador to Britain. would be excellent. And there were

Richardson, in a widely reported gaffe just before he left Washington, told a group of British correspondents that the odds were two to one he would be Kissinger's successor.

This self-designation might be an impediment to the selection of one who as under-secretary of state early in the Nixon administration proved his abilities.

Certainly if President Ford had any indication that his secretary of state contemplated resigning he would use every argument to keep him in harness. The President has repeatedly expressed not only his belief in Kissinger but his reliance on his judgment. Copyright, 1975, by U.F. Synd.

Custodian Judges Teacher By The Classroom

Appraisal By Custodians

Lincoln, Neb. The Lincoln School Board and the Lincoln Education Association wage dispute heads for the next round of talks at 7.00 p.m., March 31. After reading the Star report of March 20. I think there should be several more meetings.

I wonder how many more years it will take for our Board of Education and out LEA executive director to catch on that before we grant any pay raises, we should be making some teacher performance checks, especially in our junior and senior high schools. I'm sure, should they see the results, as their custodians and daily cleaning people do, we would be much better qualified to determine the pay raise system that should be established. A custodian notices the appearance of the room in general, the student notes, their writing on desks, walls and

The taxpayer needs to be informed that over half of our teachers could not pass a good qualified custodian's performance test. Having once been a school board member, I question how many of our teachers are even living up to their con-

Having a higher degree doesn't necessarily mean a better teacher. Some with even a doctor's degree show poor performance test grades. Too many classrooms have the appearance of being used for a plain recreation room.

On the other hand, about 10% of the classrooms that a custodian enters make them wonder if any class at all has been held. Everything is in near-perfect condition. Teachers with these rooms could pass any custodial performance nearly 100%. I'm not sure if the 14% raise is enough for this group.

While our director is so concerned about our present rising living costs, I wonder what plan he will propose should living costs take a downward slide in the face of increasing unemploy-

The word among custodians is that the students are running our schools. At a recent meeting on the matter of open campus, there were those who thought the students are mature enough for this. By just following a custodian a few nights at work, no one would need bifocals to see that many of our high school students are not mature enough for open campus.

It is way past time that level-headed taxpayers should organize to see if something can be done about the mismanagement mess that prevails in our public schools.

The Fat People's Lament

Lincoln, Neb. With as many restaurants as Lincoln has, it is a shame and disgusting that a dieter or would-be dieter cannot go out to eat and enjoy it.

Nobody is going to dress up, hire a sitter, drive to a nice restaurant for a chef's salad or low-cal plate of cottage cheese and broiled hamburger. For every person you show me who needs a basket of hot rolls, French-fried onion rings, baked potato with sour cream and side order of pasta to enjoy a steak, I can show you 700 people who need only a salad with low-cal dressing, three-ounce baked potato with one teaspoon of margarine, and four ounces of peas to enjoy a six-ounce broiled

Heading For Gateway

Lincoln, Neb. I saw the article in the Friday, March 21, Star, about the bus planners wanting to bring workers downtown so there will be more room for shoppers' cars to park in the downtown area. I for one use the bus for downtown shopping and if I use my car, it is to go to Gateway to shop.

The stores are so cheap now that they give only one rideand-shop ticket for every $5 purchase in place of the $2.50 it used to be, so from now on I will go to Gateway, where shopping is easier and parking is free.

Wonder how many more will?

The Care Of Cruisers

Lincoln, Neb. As a lifetime resident of Lincoln and the Lancaster County area, I write in regard to The Star's March 16, 1975 story: "Game Warden Arrests Youth After Chase".

"A 17-year-old Lincoln youth was arrested about 9 p.m. Saturday following a 30-minute high-speed chase. Lt. Lee Frakes said the car was going 110 m.p.h. near 84th and Havelock. He said officers attempted to stop the car initially near 70th and Havelock but the driver sped away from them east

"Frakes said Lincoln police lost sight of the car when their cruiser slid into a sign. He said neither officer was injured and damage to the vehicle was minimal".

Friday, March 14, 1975, city assistant purchasing agent Gary Kitt spoke on KFOR radio concerning the purchase of the new Lincoln police cruisers. Mr. Kitt said the new city policy was to buy new cruisers every two years, and thus the city would have better and safer cruisers on the city streets. Mr. Kitt said that the Lincoln city police get about 20,000 miles per year on each

The Lincoln police department has said that they need better educated and more highly educated policemen, so they lean toward a college education.

I say that the Lincoln police department needs to come back down to the earth and common sense, which are lost in a college education! A police cruiser is specially built for safety and highspeed, but it is still only as safe as the driver. The Lincoln police officer of March 15, 1975 was not a driver; he was and still is only in the operator category class. The proof is in the fact that he could not handle the cruiser, he lost control of it and struck a sign, damaging the sign and the cruiser. The cruiser was only about six weeks old, he was abusing it and during the high-speed chase, he did damage it by his negligence. Anyone else operating a vehicle who loses control and strikes a sign and does damage to a vehicle gets a ticket. Does being a Lincoln police officer mean that the rules do not apply to the officer?

The Lincoln police department needs to have and give a special driver training course to ALL its officers right away, and then every year.

When I was in the active military service, I received a special driver's training course every year, plus every time I checked out a vehicle I was fully liable for any damage done to that vehicle. If the U.S. government can operate that way, then the City of Lincoln can also operate that way under city tax sup-

The present Lincoln police cruisers were not bought for high-speed chases, because of the sophisticated radio systems in use, and to cut down on the huge gasoline consumption of the larger engines.

I do not feel that the Lincoln police should have new cruisers every two years, because of their past and present abuse of them. I have an 18-year-old auto that has 135,000 miles on it. It is equal to and perhaps better than the new cruisers, and is good for another 135,000 miles plus perhaps 200,000 more than

Wednesday the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors talked about political involvement and whether it is a proper chamber function.

We'll leave that up to the chamber to decide. But if the chamber decides to go into the business of "informing" its membership and the community at large on election issues, we hope that it conducts itself responsibly.

The discussion this week apparently was prompted by an outburst by Director Richard Chapin, himself a candidate for reelection to the Lincoln Airport Authority. "There are some people running for office in Lincoln who are damned dangerous to the future of the community," Chapin said.

Chamber President Paul Amen chimed in with "I'm concerned how people running for office today will shape Lincoln into what it will be 35 years from now.

We're hearing too many socialistic ideas." Chamber officials distributed newspaper clippings explaining the views of City Council candidates Steve Tiwald and Ron Kurtenbach.

Kurtenbach has talked about such things as the redistribution of income something the chamber wouldn't be expected to cotton to. But don't you suppose the electorate can judge whether these ideas have merit? It might just be that Kurtenbach's beliefs will be more politically dangerous to himself than to the community.

We took a look at Steve Tiwald's public statements. He, better than any other council candidate, has laid down a program, a statement of his beliefs. He has talked in the past few weeks about the need for better public transportation (bus system), city-county consolidation and programs for the elderly. These are things all candidates are talking about and they are not revolutionary and they shouldn't shake the pillars of the business community. If anything, Tiwald's statements have been better prepared and more thoughtful than anybody else's.

These candidates have been unfairly slurred by a director of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce and it appears as if the rest of the board didn't object too much.

If the chamber wants to broaden its political involvement it should tone its act down a bit if it wants to be credible. It has had an asinine, irresponsible beginning.

In Honor Of Norris

Efforts to honor the memory of the late Sen. George W. Norris, who was perhaps this state's most distinguished contribution to national life, have been mounted by Nebraska's rural electric systems and are being captained by Sens. Carl Curtis of Nebraska and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

The senators will introduce a bill in Congress to enable the Interior Department to acquire the Norris home in McCook, as well as nearby property, to establish a "George W. Norris Home National Historic Site." A similar bill will be introduced in the House by Nebraska Congresswoman Virginia Smith.

Norris was a member of Congress for 40 years and was the legislator most responsible for formation of the Rural Electrification Administration.

He was responsible for a good deal more than that, of course.

Norris, known variously as "the fighting liberal" and the "gentle knight of progressive ideals" and as a champion of American democracy, died only some 30 years ago. It seems like he has been gone a hundred or more. It seems like it was in a far different age when Nebraska was represented in Washington by someone of Norris' stature. Young Nebraskans have to look to their history books to find out about his kind of statesmanship.

We have long felt that one way to honor Norris and benefit this state in the process is to restore to Nebraskans and to the U.S. Senate the kind of representation. leadership and statesmanship that Norris

Nebraska once produced giants who had impact on the American scene. Hopefully we are not done yet.

A Gap In The Law?

In the Today's Mail column on Friday's editorial page, reader Edgar Pearlstein of Lincoln wrote that he sees a gap in the new city campaign income and expense reporting law.

"The gap is that a candidate can get promises of contributions, but not have to report them until the money actually comes in. Thus, one can still conduct an expensive campaign and not tell the electorate who is paying for it until after the election is over," Pearlstein said in his

He continued: "We have an example in the present election campaign. This week's official financial statement of one of the candidates tells that he borrowed $5,000 but the law does not require him to tell from whom he expects to get the money with which to repay the loan.' It appears that some sort of "gap" exists, but a legislative remedy doesn't occur to us right off the bat. We don't think governmental bodies should legislate against taking out loans for campaigns.

We think, however, that voters will see around or through the "gap".

The candidate who details his or her contributions and expenses as the campaign progresses - according to law or more frequently should the candidate so desire - will be seen as a candidate with nothing to hide. And that will be to his or her benefit.

" WASHINGTON - Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has added his voice to those who would have us believe the "Domino Theory" that the collapse of South Vietnam would endanger American positions throughout the world. But Kissinger went further.

Not only is Congress in its reluctance to grant more military aid to South Vietnam risking the domino effect, he told a news conference. It is also ignoring a "moral commitment" he and President Nixon made in working out the Paris accords of 1973. Therefore, the question is not just that of South Vietnam's survival as an independent, noncommunist country; the question also is "what kind of a people we are."

Kissinger's implication is clear - that if Congress does not honor the claimed "moral commitment" Americans will be shown to be a perfidious kind of people. Such ominous talk is aimed at the Democratic Congress — as Leslie Gelb of The New York Times learned in a survey of private administration opinion - and has little relation to reality.

* * * Aside from the egregious insult offered by Kissinger to the American people, whose finan-cial and blood sacrifices for South Vietnam have been immense, the whole idea of a moral commitment stemming from the 1973 accords has to be questioned. Kissinger negotiated that agreement in secret: American promises he might have made were not embodied in any document requiring ratification by Congress; and neither he nor Nixon had the right or the authority to make which the American people knew nothing. Gerald Ford, for example, was House minority leader at the time of the Paris accords. But long after he became president in August, 1974, he was saying privately that he did not know what promises Kissinger might have made at Paris, or in securing South Vietnamese acquiescence to the accords, or whether any such promises were

"moral commitments" about in writing. However skillful Kissinger may be at secret negotiations, he cannot elevate that kind of diplomacy into "moral commitments" by the American people.

What, moreover, do Kissinger and Ford offer? They apparently suggest that a three-year extension of more military aid would satisfy the great moral commitment, stultify the effects of the Domino Theory, preserve the

Is Kissinger On The Way Out?

American reputation for standing by an ally, and - in Kissinger's view - give South Vietnam at least a chance to become self-sustaining.

Whose 'Moral Commitment' Is It?

There is no reason to suppose that a three-year extension even at the incredible level of $2 billion annually that the administration has proposed would do any of those things. It could not satisfy a moral commitment to sustain South Vietnam if at the end of three years that unhappy country still could not defend itself. If the Domino Theory means anything now, it would mean as much three years from now. And if the United States is bidden by history to stand by any ally, no matter how dubious, at all costs and in all circumstances, lest no one ever again accept the American word, why would the United States not be as obligated three years in the future as it is claimed to be in 1975? Finally, if anyone really believes that three more years of any kind of aid at any level might make South Vietnam selfsustaining, he has not been in this world but in some other for the past 15 years.

So the three-year limitation, it

is a safe bet, would prove to be no such thing. If Congress accepts that proposition now, and if it results in South Vietnam's struggling along as an independent entity for three more years, it is as certain as anything can be that this administration, if re-elected, or some other if it is as mesmerized by Indochina as the last four, will be back for still another round of aid - and talking once again of dominoes and moral commitments.

In fact, if the history of this fruitless war is any guide, it suggests that in three years, at any conceivable level of American military aid, South Vietnam will not be better but worse off - with more Vietnamese dead, homeless and mutilated, with the Vietnamese society and economy further blasted, and with the military position of the Thieu or some other non-communist regime further weakened. What kind of "moral commitment" is it for Gerald Ford and Henry Kissinger to urge Congress to fund a war for what they describe as American objectives when it is the Vietnamese people who will pay the real price in blood and destruction?

It would be far better to twist Thieu's arm, as Kissinger did not hesitate to twist it at the time of the Paris accords in 1973, to enter into real peace negotiations with Hanoi now, while something is left to negotiate. But there is not much chance that Kissinger and Ford will do that.

"The only lesson that our politicians seem to have learned from the 1947-1952 China trauma," John Paton Davies recently wrote the editor of The New York Times, "is that a communist takeover in an East Asian country can be politically disastrous for American politicians."

So they ignore, willfully or otherwise, "the far more important China lesson . . . that the United States cannot make good serious deficiencies of leadership and collective will in a foreign country" - not with troops, not with money.

MARQUIS

WASHINGTON - As Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was flying back and forth like a ping-pong ball between Egypt and Israel in a vain effort for a further disengagement, this capital indulged in a favorite guessing game. The question at those intimate little dinner parties was: How long will Henry stay?

While the failure of his mission may mean a reassessment, those knowing him best over many years believe he will leave by the end of the year. His immediate task is to reshape American policy in the Middle East with the prospect of a long, quarrelsome conference at Geneva as Israel faces the united Arab powers.

Blamed for everything that goes wrong everywhere in the world, Kissinger sees his fate like that of other secretaries of state who have gone down before accumulated troubles at home and abroad. In the best of times a difficult office, in the worst of times the secretary faces the barricades of hostility every day. At the end of his tenure Dean Acheson took his punishment from the extreme right; Kissinger's attackers are on the left.

公 公 公 The direction of the fire is unimportant. The withering fusillade destroys the usefulness of the individual. There must be added in Kissinger's instance the fact that he was built up, with a strong assist from his own ego, to the role of Super-K. That inflation was a grave handicap.

In the view of intimates, he will leave at the end of 1975 to take up residence at Oxford in England. As lecturer in residence, dividing his time between the towers of academe and an apartment in London, he will enjoy the friendship of his innumerable friends in England and on the continent. Many were his students during his years at Harvard. At the same time he will have leisure to write the memoirs for which he has been offered sums running into several million dollars. Given his extraordinary resources of energy and brain power, all this will be a breeze for a man who took on so many responsibilities in a trying, almost impossible office.

As his friends of long standing see it, a factor in his equation is his wife, Nancy. An able assistant to Nelson Rockefeller in the studies Rockefeller directed on defense and foreign policy, she is said to have a strong feeling about the injustice of the attacks directed at her husband. Her own temperament, these same friends say, is much more adapted to the academic life rather than to the constant pressures of high public office, although with charm and intelligence she responds to the demands that go with being Mrs. Kissinger.

In an interview in the magazine, Ladies Home Journal, Mrs. Kissinger says that she sees her husband much more as the academic type, quietly working away writing his books, rather than as a cabinet officer in the full blaze of publicity. In the interview with Marvin Kalb, the CBS correspondent who has accompanied the Kissingers on their Middle East travels, there can be seen an intimation of a wish to go back to the quieter life of academia.

Health is still another factor. Those knowing Kissinger over the years are aware that under stress he becomes a compulsive eater. At present he looks it. to put it mildly, decidedly overweight and that for a man of his build and of his intensity is a built-in risk.

During the present shuttle, he was pressed by reporters accompanying him about rumors that he would be leaving the office. Having nothing to say on that score, he did talk in a general way about a possible successor. Yes, Elliot Richardson, currently ambassador to Britain, would be excellent. And there were

Richardson, in a widely reported gaffe just before he left Washington, told a group of British correspondents that the odds were two to one he would be Kissinger's successor.

This self-designation might be an impediment to the selection of one who as under-secretary of state early in the

Nixon administration proved his abilities. Certainly if President Ford had any indication that his secretary of state contemplated resigning he would use every argument to keep him in harness. The President has repeatedly expressed not only his belief in Kissinger but his reliance on his judgment.

Lincoln, Neb. The Lincoln School Board and the Lincoln Education Association wage dispute heads for the next round of talks at 7:00 p.m., March 31. After reading the Star report of March 20, I think there should be several more meetings.

I wonder how many more years it will take for our Board of Education and out LEA executive director to catch on that before we grant any pay raises, we should be making some teacher performance checks, especially in our junior and senior high schools. I'm sure, should they see the results, as their custodians and daily cleaning people do, we would be much better qualified to determine the pay raise system that should be established. A custodian notices the appearance of the room in general, the student notes, their writing on desks, walls and

Nobody is going to dress up, hire a sitter, drive to a nice restaurant for a chef's salad or low-cal plate of cottage cheese and broiled hamburger. For every person you show me who needs a basket of hot rolls, French-fried onion rings, baked potato with sour cream and side order of pasta to enjoy a steak, I can show you 700 people who need only a salad with low-cal dressing, three-ounce baked potato with one teaspoon of margarine, and four ounces of peas to enjoy a six-ounce broiled

Hearing Set On 3 Felony Theft Counts First-Degree Murder Charge Filed

North Platte (AP) - A preliminary hearing on three felony counts has been set for April 9 in Lincoln County Court for Melvin Isley, convicted last week of manslaughter.

Isley, 23, was charged by Lin- last Sunday. coln County atty. Multon Larson with three felony counts of stealing a motorcylce. He was also charged with two misdemeanors, petit larceny and giving false information to a police officer.

A trial date for the false information charge was also set for April 9. No date was set for trial on the petit larceny charge.

Bond was set at $3,000 a count, for a total of $15,000. Larson said Isley is charged with the theft of three motorcycles and a trailer July 11, 1974. The petit larceny charge stems from the alleged theft of the trailer. The false information charge results from information Isley allegedly gave to a police officer Jan. 21 when he reported that his motorcycle had been stolen, Larson said.

Isley was found guilty in Dawson County District Court last week of manslaughter in connection with the death of Fred C. Roberts Jr. of North Platte, Isley is awaiting sentencing on that conviction pending the completion of a pre-sentence investigation.

Faced with the probability of Nebraska Agricultural Stabiliza-Thursday's severe blizzard in central areas, ranchers and agricultural leaders Friday were attempting to survey the situation to determine the best approach to the problem.

Following a county-by-county executive director of the survey of the affected area, Sindt revealed that Dawes County to return the animals to their appeared to be the hardest hit in stock losses.

'Cattle are simply drifting with the wind" there, he said. He estimated at least 4,000 head have been "misplaced" in Dawes County and owners don't Exon said civil defense officials in western Nebraska have been authorized to lease roadclearing equipment from private contractors to aid in digging out. Exon pledged the governor's Exon said he has not declared the western part of the state a disaster area, but he said that 'full emergency procedures are in effect at this time." In addition to the immediate loss of newborn calves, Sindt explained the cattle will be vulnerable to a pneumonia-type reaction from the storm.

Doug Muirfield, Nebraska state-federal crop statistician, said the blizzard hit at the height of the calving season.

Calves born during the storm without human assistance had "virtually no chance of survival," according to Mickey Stewart of Alliance, president of the Nebraska Stock Growers Association.

He said the wind and snow posed a greater danger to livestock than lack of food.

Stewart said that cattle can survive four to six days without food, but in storms such as Thursday's the powder-type snow plugs eyes and noses and can suffocate livestock.

Airlift Considered

He said his association was surveying the situation in efforts haylift will be needed.

A spokesman at the Nebraska National Guard headquarters in Lincoln said late Friday the use of helicopters in feeding the stranded cattle was being considered, but he explained the helicopters sent out west Friday weren't large enough to carry much hay to the thousands of cattle in need of food and water.

North Platte (AP) - A preliminary hearing on three felony counts has been set for April 9 in Lincoln County Court for Melvin Isley, convicted last week of manslaughter.

Capt. Tate said his father had opened a checking account at an Orange Park bank for Victoria several weeks ago. The expense money to be paid by the newspaper will be placed in this account and used solely by her, he said.

Tate said he did not know the amount of the transaction. He emphasized that neither he nor his father would benefit monetarily from the sale of the story.

Victoria plans to remain in the United States for the full 90-day period granted her by Soviet visa officials, he said.

Asked if she planned to stay in this country after that, Tate replied, "I would certainly wish that she would, but her mother is still in the Soviet Union so I do not see much hope for that. However, both I and my father hope that she and her mother come to the United States again for another visit."

Victoria, 29, was the product of a World War II romance between Tate and Russian actress Zoya Fyodorova, now 62 and living in Moscow. Tate was banished from Russia when the romance was discovered, never again to see his lover nor the daughter that was born to her nine months later. His sweetheart was imprisoned for 81/2 years until Russian dictator Joseph Stalin's

Tate did not learn of his daughter's existence

Calder said the newspaper employed secret security methods for Miss Fyodorova's trip from the Soviet Union. The newspaper earlier denied it had arranged for the secret meeting, which took place March 23.

"I'm overwhelmed with happiness," Calder quoted Tate as saying at the secret rendezvous. "These last few days with my daughter have been the most wonderful of my life. Vicki is even more beautiful than her photographs."

Calder quoted Miss Fyodorova as saying of her meeting with Tate, "It was a wonderful moment, something I'll never forget."

State Department Loses Battle To Old Admiral

Orange Park, Fla. - The State Department wanted to restrict Russian movie actress Victoria Fyodorova's travels in the United States but her father, retired Rear Adm. Jackson R. Tate. "raised enough hell" to get her an unrestricted visa, Tate's son said Friday.

"When the United States first granted my sister a visa, it was extremely limited in where she could go," said retired Navy Capt. Hugh Tate, Tate's son by his first wife, Hilda. "This disturbed my father and he raised enough hell to get an unrestricted visa.'

Victoria is the love child of a wartime affair between the elder Tate, then a Navy captain on a mission to Moscow, and Russian actress Zoya Fyodorova. She finally saw her dreams come true last weekend when she met her father for the first time.

The two have managed so far to elude newsmen and have announced that they will emerge from seclusion "in about two weeks."

The younger Tate, who is in his 40's, said his half-sister is planning to make an extensive tour of the United States before she returns to the Soviet Union.

"She wants to see the usual tourist attractions, including the Grand Canyon," he said.

"I hope my father" — who recently un-derwent open-heart surgery and is 77 — "will not attempt to make the trip with her," he said. Before Victoria's arrival, the elder Tate said Victoria would travel around the country and he "would fade out of the picture" after their first meeting.

Capt. Tate said all his sister's expenses are being paid by the National Enquirer, which paid for the exclusive story of the admiral's reunion with his comely green-eved daughter.

Improved Bus System

City Council candidate Steve Tiwald said Friday he would work to improve the city bus system in a number of areas if he is elected to the council. Tiwald proposed:

- bus shelters be built and a downtown bus terminal. - more frequent bus service.

- more cross-town bus ser-- more evening and weekend service. changes in the fare system to encourage greater ridership. - a program to publicize the bus service, its routes and schedules. Although acknowledging that "mass transit will never replace private automobiles," Tiwald said those changes in the bus system would lead to "a more healthy, balanced transportation system. Tiwald said mass transit ridership should be encouraged because of parking shortages in the downtown area, traffic congestion on some city streets and the fuel shortage.

The Lincoln Transportation System Board has been considering many of the proposals Tiwald has suggested.

TiwaldFavors Piglets Thought Killed As Fire Destroys Barn Some newborn pigs were thought to have perished in a fire that leveled a barn at the John Pensick farm northeast of Lincoln Friday night.

Waverly fire chief Harold Nansel said he did not know how many pigs were in the barn or how many escaped the blaze. Nansel said that other than the pigs, the barn contained only straw. Nansel said the flames which engulfed the 20-by-40-foot barn could be seen when the fire units left Waverly.

Ritzman Heads Boosalis Staff

Mayoral candidate Helen Boosalis announced Friday that Russell Ritzman, 5114 Locust, will serve as chairman of her campaign committee. Ritzman is vice president of Weaver Potato Chips Co.

Mrs. Boosalis, who is the City Council president, also announced that Fran Minard, 2426 Sewell, will be campaign treasurer. He is vice president of Lincoln Drug Co.

Other members of her election committee include Robert Sittig, Thelma Miller, Joseph Adams, Lambrina Damian, Don Endacott and Robert Barlow.

Muggy Favors Council Control Over Housing

The Lincoln Housing Authority should be put under the control of the City Council, council candidate Bob Muggy proposed

Muggy said council control of the authority would result in better coordination and planning. State legislation would be needed to enact such a change, Muggy also said the city could put unemployed people to work, repairing run-down areas and cleaning up areas. He did not say how he would initiate such a program or where the funds would come from.

Women Get Senior Salute

BY JOANNE FARRIS

This week there are two women to receive our senior salute.

The first is Susie Sharp, recently elected chief justice of the North Carolina State Supreme Court. This 67-year-old jurist was one of the first women to graduate from the University of North Carolina Law School.

She was the only woman in the 1929 class of 60 students. She describes her entry into the practice of law this way:

"In those days it wouldn't have been easy for a woman lawyer to have made it on her own. But fortunately, my father provided the business, and when the clients found out I could handle it, they eventually became reconciled to me doing it." In 1949, Justice Sharp became the first woman superior court judge in the state, and in 1962 she became the first woman associate supreme court justice in North Carolina. Justice Sharp wears lace around the neck of her black robe to soften its line.

While she is not active in the women's liberation movement. like many other professional women of standing, she is concerned about equal rights, equal pay, and equal opportunities for women. She remembers very well that

Students' Eyes Listen, Teacher's Hands Talk

Montpelier. Vt. (UPI) — While senators debated the pros and cons of atomic power, the high school students sat in the shadow of the president's rostrum and listened intently as their young teacher explained the proceedings.

But no senator objected to the apparent breach of legislative decorum. And neither of the two senate doorkeepers warned the group to quiet down or leave.

Social studies teacher Richard Virkstis was "speaking" with his hands. And his class "listened" with their eyes. They are deaf.

The statehouse tour was all in a day's school work for the nine juniors and seniors at the Austine School in Brattleboro, Vermont's major facility for the deaf.

"It's one way of getting the kids to respond and be motivated," said Virkstis, who came to the school six years ago on a trial basis - and stayed.

"In class, they talk," Virkstis said. "They read lips and some of them can hear to some degree.

"When they get out in public, though, they know their speech isn't so hot, and they're a little intimidated.

'But," he added, "when they're alone together, they're full of chatter because they're not being judged."

Many Offerings

In the less tangible domain, the gallery now offers a full range of art classes; monthly showings which feature the works of regional artists; studio space for artists; framing; a rental/purchase program; scholarships; and an annual artist-inresidence program.

The gallery receives a 33-1/3% commission on all works of art sold, based on an IRS requirement.

That income covers one-third of the gallery's operating expenses, according to Mrs. Wallace. The remaining expenses are paid for out of donations, class tuition, studio rental and membership fees.

When looking at the gallery today, it's hard to imagine that, back in the early days, there was, as Mrs. Wallace put it, "a question of whether or not to stay open. If any one of us had suggested that we close, we would have."

But no one suggested it. The Haymarket crew persevered.

And, thanks to that, it's working.

The 23rd chapter of The Book of Luke gives the account of the Trial, Crucifixation, and Burial of The Lord Jesus Christ. We are quoting extracts from this chapter:

I will therefore chastise Him, and release Him. (For of necessity he must release one unto them at that feast.) And they cried out all at once, saying. Since 1968, when the gallery's doors were first opened to the public, the Haymarket crew has come close to accomplishing a small miracle.

The Bruins of Coach John Wooden have made a habit of winning collegiate basketball titles, and they are favored to do it again this weekend after a lapse of one year. The perennial Pacific-8 champs won seven consecutive NCAA titles until North Carolina State took it from them last

For the ninth consecutive year, the Bruins are in the final round of four. They battle Louisville in one semifinal at the San Diego Sports Arena Saturday while Kentucky meets surprising Syracuse in the other.

UCLA, 26-3, headed The Associated Press poll after the regional tournaments with Kentucky, 25-4, in the second spot. Louisville, 27-2, was ranked fourth and Syracuse, 23-7, sixth.

Kentucky pulled the big surprise of last weekend when the Wildcats beat previously undefeated and No. 1-ranked Indiana, 92-90.

NCAA Tourney Notes

Tid-bits along the tourney trail.

Kentucky is no stranger to NCAA play. The Wildcats have appeared in 22 tournaments, reaching the final four six times and winning the title four times . . . They've been in 16 of the past 20 NCAA tourneys, missing championship action only in 1960, 1963, 1967 and 1974.

Kentucky's 1958 champions, coached by Adolph Rupp, had the worst record of any team ever to win the national crown -23-6 . . . Oregon's 1939 champs, the first year of the tourney, had a 29-5 mark while City College of New York, winner in 1950, posted a 24-5 mark . . . Some of those losses might have been "fixed" games because that school was involved in the "pointshaving" scandal of that era.

San Francisco, with Bill Russell as the star, became the first undefeated team to carry home the trophy with a 29-0 record North Carolina went 32-0 to win the next year, despite Kansas and Wilt Chamberlain ... Four UCLA teams have won the crown with perfect marks - 30-0 each time in 1964, 1967, 1972

Purdue won the Big Ten Conference championship in 1940. the second year of the tournament, but TURNED DOWN the bid to play for the championship . . . So, runner-up Indiana accepted and won its first title with a 21-3 record. The Hoosiers also won in 1953 with a 23-3 mark.

Should Syracuse win the title, the Orangemen would become the losingest champ ever. They're 23-7 going into Saturday's game against Kentucky. Syracuse was 24-5 last season, also good enough for a tourney bid, but the Orangemen lost in the first round to Oral Roberts. No team has ever scored 100 points in a title game. The record is 98 by UCLA against Duke's 83 in 1964 . . . Believe it or not, the oldest record in a final game is held by former Kentucky All-American Bill Spivey when he grabbed 21 rebounds against Kansas State in 1951. Indiana, which fell to Kentucky last Saturday 92-90 to end up with a 31-1 record, was the 13th team to enter NCAA postseason competition undefeated . . . Unlucky 13, you might

Two inches higher than her previous best, the jump moved her from a tie for fifth on the all-time charts to a tie for second with Polly Rothwell, a 1972 graduate of Hyannis High

Steiner's 5-5 jump represents the best jump in the state since East High's Toni Churchill jumped 5-7 in 1972 to top the

Last year, Steiner used the conventional western roll while earning the Class A state championship with a jump of 5-2, but coach Sue Peters and South boys coach Merlin Lawrence figured the straight on approach would utilize her gymnastics ability better.

Taking off one foot, her head is now the first part of her body over the bar, and she does a version of the flip on the way over so her legs don't catch the bar.

"The gymnastics training helps a lot now because I'm used to the flip," Steiner says. "It was a bit confusing at first (the transition from a two foot vault takeoff to the required one foot high jump takeoff), but now I'd probably have more trouble if I tried to vault off two feet today.

"As far as Nancy is concerned," coach Peters says,

"she's had all the basics and the takeoff from gymnastics, so I think it's helped her a lot.'

Her accomplishment is even greater considering the weather has permitted only enough outdoor workouts for two jumping

"She's been doing a lot of running, both indoors and out," Peters notes. "And she's really built up her strength."

Apparently by the all-time charts, Steiner isn't the only high jumper who's turned the adverse weather conditions into an opportunity for extra conditioning

Of the twelve events charted for girls all-time bests, only the high jump has shown any improvement in the short length of time the season has been going.

In the Metro meet alone, Steiner and Omaha Westside's Sue Greenly both cracked the all-time top ten, with second place Greenly's 5-3 jump placing her in an eight-way tie for sixth.

Last year, 5-2 would've qualified for all-time consideration, and two Bellevue jumpers reached that mark in the Metro. Fifth place in the meet was a respectable 5-0 by Deb Grafentin

All-Americans On Sidelines

Four of the five collegiate basketball players who were selected concensus All-Americans in 1974-75 won't be playing for the big prize in the NCAA basketball tournament Saturday and Monday. Their teams have been beaten.

Only Dave Meyers, UCLA forward, will suit up at the Sports Arena in San Diego for what many consider the greatest show in sports, featuring pep bands, cheer leaders, and colorful cheering

The competition provides a "clinic" for the nation's college coaches, who hold their annual national convention in conjunction with the tourney. The fired line up in hotel lobbies seeking to make a connection so they'll have a pay check next winter.

There also are hopefuls among the high school ranks who attend the convention with an eye to moving up in their profes-

The United States Basketball Writers Association also meets at this time, hashing out box-score styles, criticizing press box services where they need criticizing, applauding the good press guides put out by sports information directors, and freeloading on the NCAA.

Incidentally, the concensus All-American team, in addition to Meyers, was Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame, David Thompson of North Carolina State, and John Lucas of Maryland.

The concensus was figured by using the All-American teams of Associated Press, United Press International, Basketball Weekly, The Sporting News, U.S. Basketball Writers Association, National Association of Basketball Coaches, and the team picked by the 18 head coaches of the National Basketball Association.

NCAA Tourney Notes

Tid-bits along the tourney trail:

Kentucky is no stranger to NCAA play. The Wildcats have appeared in 22 tournaments, reaching the final four six times and winning the title four times . . . They've been in 16 of the past 20 NCAA tourneys, missing championship action only in 1960, 1963, 1967 and 1974.

Kentucky's 1958 champions, coached by Adolph Rupp, had the worst record of any team ever to win the national crown -23-6 . . . Oregon's 1939 champs, the first year of the tourney, had a 29-5 mark while City College of New York, winner in 1950, posted a 24-5 mark . . . Some of those losses might have been "fixed" games because that school was involved in the "pointshaving" scandal of that era.

San Francisco, with Bill Russell as the star, became the first undefeated team to carry home the trophy with a 29-0 record. North Carolina went 32-0 to win the next year, despite Kansas and Wilt Chamberlain ... Four UCLA teams have won the crown with perfect marks - 30-0 each time in 1964, 1967, 1972 and 1973.

Purdue won the Big Ten Conference championship in 1940. the second year of the tournament, but TURNED DOWN the bid to play for the championship . . . So, runner-up Indiana accepted and won its first title with a 21-3 record. The Hoosiers also won in 1953 with a 23-3 mark.

Should Syracuse win the title, the Orangemen would become the losingest champ ever. They're 23-7 going into Saturday's game against Kentucky. Syracuse was 24-5 last season, also good enough for a tourney bid, but the Orangemen lost in the first round to Oral Roberts.

No team has ever scored 100 points in a title game. The record is 98 by UCLA against Duke's 83 in 1964 . . . Believe it or not, the oldest record in a final game is held by former Kentucky

All-American Bill Spivey when he grabbed 21 rebounds against Kansas State in 1951. Indiana, which fell to Kentucky last Saturday 92-90 to end up with a 31-1 record, was the 13th team to enter NCAA postseason competition undefeated . . . Unlucky 13, you might

There will be some big holes to fill in the lineup as the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Cornhuskers begin spring football workouts Monday, but coach Tom Osborne is op-1-2 in the Class A and overall distimistic.

'We lost some very fine football players, as we have every year, but we have some outstanding players returning and some very fine young players who could help us become a fine team," Osborne said.

"We shoot for the Big Eight title, a bowl bid and as high a national rating as possible - and we don't expect to change any of our goals in 1975," he said.

He said Davis "proved once one of the toughest competitors ment for Dave Humm. Returning starters on offense nastics.

In vaulting, competitors sprint some 200 feet down the gymnasium floor before hitting the springboard from a straightaway angle to complete their vaults.

Steiner is using a similar, straight-on approach for the high jump. And with the new style, established herself as the second best jumper in girls prep history. Competing in the seasonopening Metro Girls' Indoor Relays Wednesday, Steiner leaped 5-5. Two inches higher than her previous best, the jump moved her from a tie for fifth on the all-time charts to a tie for second with Polly Rothwell, a 1972 graduate of Hyannis High School.

Steiner's 5-5 jump represents the best jump in the state since East High's Toni Churchill jumped 5-7 in 1972 to top the charts.

Last year, Steiner used the conventional western roll while earning the Class A state championship with a jump of 5-2, but coach Sue Peters and South boys coach Merlin Lawrence figured the straight on approach would utilize her gymnastics ability better.

Taking off one foot, her head is now the first part of her body over the bar, and she does a version of the flip on the way over so her legs don't catch the bar.

"The gymnastics training helps a lot now because I'm used to the flip," Steiner says. "It was a bit confusing at first (the transition from a two foot vault takeoff to the required one foot high jump takeoff), but now I'd probably have more trouble if I tried to vault off two feet

today. "As far as Nancy is concerned," coach Peters says,

"she's had all the basics and the takeoff from gymnastics, so I think it's helped her a lot."

Her accomplishment is even greater considering the weather has permitted only enough outdoor workouts for two jumping

"She's been doing a lot of running, both indoors and out," Peters notes. "And she's really built up her strength." Apparently by the all-time charts, Steiner isn't the only high jumper who's turned the adverse weather conditions into an opportunity for extra conditioning

Of the twelve events charted for girls all-time bests, only the high jump has shown any improvement in the short length of time the season has been going.

In the Metro meet alone, Steiner and Omaha Westside's Sue Greenly both cracked the all-time top ten, with second place Greenly's 5-3 jump placing her in an eight-way tie for sixth.

Last year, 5-2 would've qualified for all-time consideration, and two Bellevue jumpers reached that mark in the Metro.

Fifth place in the meet was a respectable 5-0 by Deb Grafentin of Omaha Northwest, one of the all-time 880 leaders.

At the Kearney State invitational a week earlier, Elwood's Karol McKenzie, the overall state gold medalist in 1974, tied her best with a 5-3 effort, while Grand Island's LouAnn Ridenoure was just under her 5-3 best with a 5-21/2

Mrs. Rankin, a resident of Midland, Tex., who became a professional 13 years ago, had shot a 75 Thursday, but her three-under-par 33 front side Friday moved her into contention.

Mrs. Carner was within seven feet of the hole after her drive with a four iron shot. She barely missed the putt which would have given her an eagle and a two-stroke lead. But the short birdie putt meant a one-stroke lead with a 36 hole score of fiveunder-par 139.

Stander Saves More Money

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP)-Heavyweight boxer Ron Stander got in just under the bell late Thursday, saving himself some money.

After being ticketed Wednesday night for driving a van with expired license plates, Stander, 30, was arrested on intoxication charges when he protested the ticketing a little too vehemently. Stander was to appear in court Thursday morning to answer to the intoxication charge, and when he failed to appear at the appointed hour, his $50 bond was forfeited.

However, Stander arrived in the court late Thursday morning, entering a guilty plea. Magistrate Don Heath set aside the earlier bond forfeiture, and fined Stander $25. Stander was to have appeared in court again Friday for a preliminary hearing on charges stemming from a break in at an adult book store in the Bluffs earlier this month, but those proceedings were transferred to Pottawattamie County District Court, and a date for new hearings in the case is expected to be set next week.

Chairman Paul Douglas of the State Crime Commission Friday suggested its members give thought to meeting at locations around Nebraska. The commission, which on requests for funds for crimefighting proposals, has traditionally met in Lincoln. In action at its meeting Friday the commission approved an application for $280,000 to create a special office of planning and programming for the State Department of Correctional Ser-The office would work to im-national, rather than state, level. The commission also approved a $125,000 request for the same kind of funds from the commission itself. The funds would be used to create a statistical analysis division to continue work on setting up a computerized system to keep records on the state's criminal justice system.

Serious crime in Lincoln shot up 24% during 1974, according to statistics released Friday by the State Crime Commission. The Lincoln figures were part of a 20% increase in crime reported in all of Nebraska during the past year. In the seven major crime categories Lincoln showed four murders in 1974, compared to none in 1973. Thirty-nine rapes were reported in 1974, compared with 25 the year before, a 56% increase. Robberies increased from 42 to 57, an increase of 36%. Felony assaults were up 12% to 272 from 243 the year before. The number of reported burglaries went up 15% from 1187 to 1365.

The total number of serious crimes reported for 1974 was 7,-714 compared to 6,203 in 1973.

The figures compare to statewide tallies that show murders down 15% to 55 compared to 63, rapes up 21% from 235 to 284, robberies up 26% from 949 to 1,393, felony assaults up 26% to 1,893 compared to 1,-508, burglaries up 22% to 11,460 from 9.368, larcenies up 23% to 30,697 compared to 25,018 and motor vehicle theft, down 9% to 4,140 from 4,552.

Omaha posted increases in six of the seven categories.

Chairman Paul Douglas of the State Crime Commission Friday suggested its members give thought to meeting at locations around Nebraska.

The commission, which acts on requests for funds for crimefighting proposals, has traditionally met in Lincoln.

In action at its meeting Friday the commission approved an application for $280,000 to create a special office of planning and programming for the State Department of Correctional Services. The office would work to implement the state corrections plan given to Gov. J. James Exon late last year and pending penal reform legislation if passed by the State Legislature.

The application seeks federal funds that are released on the national, rather than state, level.

The commission also approved a $125,000 request for the same kind of funds from the commission itself.

The funds would be used to create a statistical analysis division to continue work on setting up a computerized system to keep records on the state's criminal justice system.

These reports, as required by the County Compliance Addendum to Nebraska's Action Plan, contain certain data needed for a study of a highway project prior to the start of the planning period. Since not all highway improvements are of the same magnitude, nor will they have similar economic, social and environmental effects, a project level will be assigned to each project to indicate the complexity of the project and the detail of the required study procedure. The above listed projects have been tentatively classified as "Non-Major" and "Level G." Such classification indicates a minimum degree of study and does not require an Environmental Impact Statement or a Negative Declaration.

In a statement released to the in Saigon, DeCamp said South Vietnam "is a different world ficer in the Mekong Delta.

people and American officials during his visit.

"Back then," the statement quoted DeCamp saying, "we were trying to do everything for press through the U.S. Embassy the Vietnamese people - including using our own boys to fight the war for them. Today, than it was four or five years the Vietnamese are ready, ago" when he ran for and won willing and able to save this his first major political office country if we Americans will while serving as an infantry of- just provide them the physical means to do it."

DeCamp denied he has is currently in South Vietnam on changed his stand on the war since he ran for election in 1970 when he criticized the use of U.S. ground troops in Vietnam.

'They (the Vietnamese) have acquired a strong national identity. All they need are the tools, which I have always been in favor of providing. I disagreed with the use of American boys to fight the war for them."

The state senator criticized the U.S. Congress for delaying the vote of $300 million in emergency military aid for South Vietnam as requested by the Ford administration. He said, "The Vietnamese who have fought so long and valiantly for the side we supported will - if the end ever comes — surely suffer severe retribution at the hands of the Communists.

'This is a clear-cut invasion by another nation. There's no longer any question of civil war. Our delay in acting is daily bringing suffering and death to thousands of innocent people," DeCamp said.

Remarking that the use of American troops "to fight the war for the Vietnamese" did not work, DeCamp said, "Now, when they are willing to fight to the last man to save their country, we tell them to go to hell, that we won't even give them the material to do it with."

DeCamp's statement did not refer in detail to the current North Vietnamese nationwide offensive in which the Saigon government has lost 12 provinces, including the northern city of Hue, often without any major fighting. He went on to argue that the United States has a political and moral obligation to continue helping the South Vietnamese and its government. DeCamp said he will do three things upon his return to Nebraska: -Along with a number of other political leaders, meet in State Henry Kissinger at a foreign policy conference in Washington where "I plan to tell him as clearly as possible what I believe our obligations are here in Vietnam."

The Associated Press contacted officials of the Holt Adoption Agency in Eugene, Ore., the Friends for All Children Agency tion officer for the Holt agency, in Boulder, Colo., and the Friends of Children of Vietnam agency in Denver.

Each is handling proceedings for Nebraska families who wish to adopt Vietnamese children, state officials said.

Spokesmen for the Holt agency and the Friends of Children of Vietnam said Nebraska adoptions are not processed as quickly as those from some other states, partly because of the "middleman" situation involving the Welfare Department. Sally Bergner of Friends of

"Sen. DeCamp was particularly concerned about five or six specific cases brought to his attention," Schmit said. "He said he was trying to arrange for two of the children to return with him to Nebraska, but he wasn't at all able to say what the odds on that could be.'

Exon expects the Welfare Department report soon. Nedrow said it would "mostly reflect what the reporters have found out.'

'When I receive the report from the Welfare Department I may contact the Department of State by letter, with copies to the Nebraska congressional delegation, asking for all possible cooperation in expediting matters in Vietnam," Exon said.

"Needless to say I want to do, I would do, anything that I could to get rid of any delays," the governor added.

Nedrow said an initial check showed families in eight Nebraska counties are in various stages of adopting a Vietnamese child. The counties include Douglas, Scotts Bluff, Buffalo, Dodge, Kearney, Wheeler, York and Hall.

Fire Safety Equipment

By The Associated Press The Nebraska Capitol is still awaiting some fire safety improvements that were ordered several years ago.

In addition, the Capitol has a fire alarm system, but it is not connected to the alarm system at the Lincoln Fire Department. Thus, if a fire tripped an alarm in the building, a security guard would have to find a phone and call the fire department before it could respond.

State Fire Marshal Ace T. Backer said he would like to see the Capitol hooked in with the city system. "If there were a fire, with the concentration of people you have, the firemen would need all the head start they could get," Bakeer said.

The tie-in to the local fire department isn't a safety code requirement. It would mean an additional cost of about $15 to $20 a month.

The lack of a tie-in alarm system is one of several possible fire safety hazards in the Capitol, officials indicated. Former State Fire Marshal

Joe Pluta ordered installation of fire doors to protect the only exit
